The Quarterly is published four times a year by the James Renwick Alliance, an independent national non-profit organization, created to celebrate the achievements of America's craft artists and to foster scholarship, education, and public appreciation of craft art. Founded in 1982, the Alliance helps support the nation's showcase of contemporary American craft, the Renwick Gallery of the Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, D.C. The opinions expressed therein are not those of the James Renwick Alliance, its board of directors or the Smithsonian American Art Museum Renwick Gallery and its staff. The Quarterly is published for members of the James Renwick Alliance and is not for sale.

SPRING CRAFT WEEKEND
April 23, 24, 25, 2010

from the outgoing president...

I have now passed the gavel of the James Renwick Alliance to Miriam Bonner. My volume of e-mail and telephone calls has dramatically diminished. I would like to thank all of you who have contributed your time, intellect and resources to the Alliance the past two years.

I enjoyed my tenure as president because of all of the assistance that you, the members, have contributed to make my job easier. I think that we have built a strong foundation with the Smithsonian American Art Museum which can be expanded upon to further the recognition and support of contemporary American craft. We tried out some new activities with JRA Day and the JRA's participation in ARTomatic with more than 76,000 attendees over six weeks to raise funds and to reach out to new audiences and seek new members.

We need new funding sources and more members; our pledge to the Smithsonian, based on the income of the JRA, is down significantly for 2010 despite our membership numbers holding up. I hope that all of you will continue your involvement with the JRA and will contribute your time and resources to the Alliance in the future so that the organization will grow and prosper. Many hardworking members are planning exciting events for the future. Good luck and good prosperity!

These are interesting times to become head of an arts organization. The challenges are many and well known. Over the next two years, I will work with the Board of Directors, and you, as members, to address how the organization should position itself for the future and take action. There will not be easy answers. Times have changed. What worked in the past may not work in the future. I hope you will help me and participate with your special skills in supporting the organization and its events.

The JRA is an impressive organization. You, the membership, are foremost patrons of the arts. It is thrilling to walk through the Renwick Gallery and see in the display plaques the extent to which the JRA has helped form the Renwick Gallery's permanent collection and created a legacy of American artistry for generations to view and appreciate. I am continually amazed at the creativity of artist members, at the depth and breadth of knowledge of the arts (in many forms) of so many members, at the involvement and influence members have on other arts organizations, and last but not least, at seeing the world-class studio craft collections of JRA members. I am delighted to be part of the JRA and to participate in its support for the Renwick Gallery and its support for the broader studio craft community.

NOMINATIONS FOR DISTINGUISHED CRAFT EDUCATOR ARE DUE BY SEPTEMBER 10

From Diane Grainer, Committee Chair

Nominations for the award of Distinguished Craft Educator are due in the JRA office by Sept. 10. A committee will evaluate nominations for this award and present those selected to the JRA Board for approval.

The following criteria apply: The award recipients may be currently active or retired, and must have:

- A reputation for excellence and innovation in education
- Had influence on students in a craft education program
- Made significant contributions to American education in the craft field
- Recognition as a current or retired distinguished educator by peers in the craft field

A letter of nomination should include a brief justification of choice/choices with information about the educational activities of the nominee, special contributions and effect on students and the current craft scene in one page. Letters from former students, colleagues, etc., may be included or be sent separately to:

Diane Grainer
 10615 Belfast Place
 Potomac, MD 20854
 Fax: 301 765-0651
 or email to dmgrainer@comcast.net

I may be contacted at 301 765-0649 with any questions.

APOLOGY: Beth Kendal was listed as Beth Randal in the April issue of the Newsletter and on the website. We apologize for this misprint.

MARK YOUR CALENDAR FOR JRA DAY NOVEMBER 28

From Mallory Lawson, Organizer

Mark your calendar for our second JRA Day, Saturday, Nov. 28, at the Womans Club of Chevy Chase, 7931 Connecticut Avenue. There will be plenty of free parking as well as 40 spaces across the street at the Chevy Chase Library. We're extending the show hours from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on the first Saturday after Thanksgiving, so hopefully everyone will be in Holiday Shopping Mode.

JRA Day has attracted 19 new exhibitors this year and a greater variety than last year's group. We're using the "Lounge" in the back for additional artists' spaces and will be giving a discount to JRA members.

This year we're adding one new fundraising venue for the JRA, "JRA Bay." This is a play on E-bay and will be an opportunity for all members to donate a previously used item to the effort. We're looking for craft items that came from any of the major craft shows and/or Renwick Alliance auctions. They need to be in the retail range of $50 to $500 and perfect condition. Jewelry, medium sized sculptural items, serving pieces, interesting planters, generic scarves, and/or things that will appeal to a wide range of people are priority items.

These items will be offered at a "buy-it-now" price and at auction with a minimum bid. Each item will be tagged with the artist's name, the description, retail price and donor's name, displayed on the stage and manned by committee members. Clean out those jewelry drawers! Open those cabinet doors! We all have wonderful things that can be recycled (and it's so in fashion now). We'll start collecting those items in the fall.

If anyone, other than last year's committee members (I will call upon you!), would like to help this year, or if anyone has questions, please contact me through the JRA office at 202 337-2805 or mallorylawsonasid@msn.com. It's a fun day, but we can use lots of help. It took the entire JRA Village to put it on last year, and we're tackling a longer and bigger show this time.

Check out the www.jraday.org website this fall to see the participating artists and examples of their work.

Rising Star Tim Tate

JRA's artist and board member Tim Tate received two important artists' awards this summer. He is the 2009 recipient of a $35,000 award for sculpture from the Virginia A. Groot Foundation, which established the grant in 1988 so that a ceramic or sculpture artist may have the opportunity to devote a substantial period of time to the development of one's work. He was also named one of nine "Rising Stars of the 21st Century" awardees from WheatonArts during its summer program at Glass Weekend July 17–19.

GRAND SALON INSTALLATION PAINTINGS FROM THE SMITHSONIAN AMERICAN ART MUSEUM

June 6, 2009 — Permanent

A new installation of seventy paintings from the Smithsonian American Art Museum's collection is on view indefinitely in the Grand Salon of the Museum's branch, the Renwick Gallery. The installation features landscapes, portraits, and allegorical works by fifty-one American artists from the 1840s to the 1930s.

Many of these paintings have not been exhibited in a number of years. Artists whose works are on view include Edward Mitchell Bannister, Romaine Brooks, Elliott Daingerfield, Daniel Garber, William Morris Hunt, George Inness, Homer Dodge Martin, Albert Pinkham Ryder, Abbott Handerson Thayer, John Henry Twachtman, and Irving R. Wiles.

The room is installed salon style, with paintings hung one-atop-another and side by side. A visitor guide, Looking at Pictures in the Grand Salon—A Guide to the Artists, is available only on site in the Grand Salon and includes short biographies of the artists and wonderful archival photographs.

STAGED STORIES RENWICK CRAFT INVITATIONAL 2009

August 7, 2009 – January 3, 2010

Staged Stories: Renwick Craft Invitational 2009 presents the work of ceramic artist Christyl Boger, fiber artist Mark Newport, glass artist Mary Van Cline, and ceramic artist SunKoo Yuh. These artists depart in significant ways from long-standing craft traditions by discarding the baseline rationale of crafts, their functionality, to create narrative artworks that confound old categories in the world of contemporary craft. As the exhibition title suggests, theatrical elements, including props, costumes, and narration, bind together these varied works.

Christyl Boger (b. 1959), an assistant professor at Indiana University in Bloomington, creates large-scale gilded ceramic figurines that incorporate contemporary props such as inflatable swimming pool toys. Mark Newport (b. 1964), artist-in-residence and head of the fiber department at the Cranbrook Academy of Art in Bloomfield Hills, Michigan, examines issues of masculinity through knitted superhero costumes that mix adolescent male subject matter with craft techniques usually associated with women. Mary Van Cline (b. 1954), who lives and works in Seattle, creates large black-and-white photographs of austere landscapes and encases them in glass to create staged environments. SunKoo Yuh (b. 1960), an associate professor at the University of Georgia in Athens, creates densely layered ceramic sculptures and drawings that compress multiple figures into a complex story incorporating Eastern and Western imagery.

Staged Stories is the fourth in a biennial exhibition series—established in 2000—that honors the creativity and talent of craft artists working today. The exhibition includes fifty-eight artworks selected by Kate Bonansinga, director and chief curator of the Stanlee and Gerald Rubin Center for the Visual Arts at the University of Texas at El Paso, who is the guest curator of the exhibition. Robyn Kennedy, chief of the Renwick Gallery, and Nicholas Bell, curator, coordinated the exhibition at the Renwick Gallery. The four artists included in the exhibition were chosen by Kate Bonansinga; Jane Milosch, Renwick Gallery curator; and Paul J. Smith, director emeritus of the Museum of Arts and Design.

PROGRAMS FOR THE INVITATIONAL EXHIBITION

A REVOLUTION IN WOOD TURNED WOOD FROM THE CHARLES AND FLEUR BRESLER COLLECTION

September 24, 2010 – January 30, 2011

A Revolution in Wood celebrates the extraordinary recent gift of turned wood objects from collectors Fleur and Charles Bresler. The Bresler collection has a noticeably distinct aesthetic that emphasizes sculptural qualities and decorative motifs integrated into the whole form. The craftsmanship is exquisite and finely detailed. Wood turning has gained recognition as an art form since World War II. The exhibition will highlight contemporary wood turning's growing sophistication, and will feature sixty-six objects from the 1980s and 1990s, including a number of artworks that will be on public display for the first time.

Nicholas Bell, curator at the Renwick Gallery, is organizing the exhibition.

Frank E. Cummings III, On the Edge Naturally, 1990, lathe turned, carved, and inlaid Mexican kingwood burl, 18k gold, and Mother-of-pearl, 12 1/4 x 6 1/8 x 7 1/4 inches. (31.1 x 15.6 x 18.4 cm), Smithsonian American Art Museum, Gift of Fleur and Charles Bresler.

MICHAEL MONROE RETIRES FROM BELLEVUE ARTS MUSEUM

The Board of Trustees of Bellevue Arts Museum (BAM) announced that Michael Monroe, Director of Curatorial Affairs, will retire from BAM in February 2010. Upon his retirement, Monroe will become Director Emeritus in honor of his outstanding achievements at the Museum.

Monroe was curator-in-charge of the Renwick Gallery and is a friend to many James Renwick Alliance members. He was the moderator for the symposium during Spring Craft Weekend in April and described each piece in the live auction. He is a James Renwick Alliance member.

THE ART OF GAMAN ARTS AND CRAFTS FROM THE JAPANESE AMERICAN INTERNMENT CAMPS, 1942–1946

March 5, 2010 – January 30, 2011

The Art of Gaman will showcase arts and crafts made by Japanese Americans in U.S. internment camps during World War II. While incarcerated, the internees tried to gaman, a Japanese word that means to bear the seemingly unbearable with dignity and patience. Housed in tar-paper covered barracks furnished with nothing more than metal cots, the internees used scraps and found materials to create furniture, toys and games, musical instruments, pendants and pins, purses, and ornamental displays. These objects became essential both for simple creature comforts and emotional survival.

This exhibition presents an opportunity to educate a new generation of Americans about the internment experience and will provide a historical context through archival photographs and artifacts. The exhibition, organized by San Francisco-based author and guest curator Delphine Hirasuna, with the cooperation of the Japanese American Citizens League, will feature more than 100 objects, many of which are on loan from former internees or their families. The exhibition is based on Hirasuna’s 2005 book The Art of Gaman.

Spring Craft Weekend

LEFT, Co-chairs are Barbara Bennett for the Patrons Evening and Brigitte Savage for Spring Craft Weekend.

The James Renwick Alliance realized a profit of over $80,000 from Spring Craft Weekend Events; yet one single event of Spring Craft Weekend, Apr. 23–26, 2009, does not stand out alone. The entire weekend of seven events (studio visits on Thursday, Caucus Day and artists demonstrations at Gateway Arts Community, Patrons Evening on Friday, Symposium, Gala/ Auctions on Saturday and the Sunday Awards Brunch) has special meaning for each person; therefore, The Quarterly presents the weekend in photographs on the next seven pages. Information on these photographs and many others is available at the JRA office at 301 907-3888 or e-mail message to admin@jra.org. Unless otherwise indicated, Miriam Rosenthal, JRA artist member, is the photographer.

Korea

IS UNLIKE ANY OTHER ASIAN COUNTRY

Norman Mitchell

Seoul, capitol of the Republic of Korea, is a city unlike any other in Asia. Mostly built after the end World War II in 1945 and the Korean Conflict in 1953, it more resembles a western city with tall sky scrapers, modern highways, and numerous edge cities built outside the city and extending far beyond its boundaries. However, the constant presence of rice fields keeps one's perspective on the fact that it is an Asian country.

What we, Craft Leaders Caucus members, learned is that contemporary craft dates from the end of these wars. With the invasion of the Japanese army in 1910, the craftsmen disappeared and their focus was changed into making machinery which made weapons of war. After 1945 and again 1953, a new generation of craftsmen and artists traveled and studied abroad in the United States, England, and the Continent to learn skills in metal, ceramics, wood, fiber and most recently glass. What we saw were craftsmen equal to any in America with a slant of what survived in the Korean mind: ancient fiber and paper arts revived, exquisite metal work which we sampled at the Korus House here in April, an amazing ceramics community culminated at the Ceramics International Exhibition in cities south of Seoul. Koreans are new to the glass movement, with the first glass artist Ki Ra Kim studying formally at Rhode Island School of Design. Korea has one gallery which exhibits at SOFA Chicago and several studios of artists less than 50 years of age, working in fused, cast, blown and kiln formed glass.

LEFT, Hyunseok Shim wanted a camera and could not afford one, so he made one himself. An accomplished metal worker, he made these cameras as necklaces as well.

The World Ceramics Exhibition Foundation’s biennial of international ceramics, displayed in the cities of Icheon and Jeju, were everything expected with work from many American, European, Japanese and Australian artists. Our hosts were the wives of the WOCEF organizer, the governor of the province, the mayors of three cities and the gallery director of the Chosen Ceramics Museum.

Other hosts were the family of a major industrialist, the owner of a new museum of traditional furniture, a collector of fans, a collector of furniture with inlaid mother-of-pearl, a shopping center owner, the Lock Museum, fiber, jewelry, wood, ceramics and embroidery artists or museum owners, craft councils and shows.

Impressive as one might think was a visit to the observation tower and Unification Park at the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ, located 35 miles from Seoul) where one could see the North Korean soldiers in their outdated trucks across the rivers.

Impressive also was the artist colony at Heyri Village, about 10 minutes from the DMZ. Created by a person who commissioned contemporary architects to design fantastic buildings, the village is home to many excellent galleries and studios. To be a resident, an artist must have a living space, a studio space and a gallery space for other artists' work. We even met a professor of ceramics (Korean-American) at the University of Michigan who stopped by to see how his two former students were doing in their resident's space.

Memorable was a gallery and museum which specialized in onggi—food storage pots discussed by Robert Sayers on Caucus Day—hundreds from centuries old to modern stacked outside the gallery.

The trip was helped along by Komelia Okim of Rockville and her sidekick Seung Hee Kim of Kookmim University, Kiwon Wang of New York City, Dr. Judith Schwartz of New York State University, and wine master Terry Beaty. Because of so many donations of food and the lesser cost of a bus, James Renwick Alliance even made money.

ABOVE Heyri Village, an artist community near the DMZ, was a mecca of craft. A resident artist at Heyri Village must maintain a studio, a home and a gallery to show work of other artists. James (Jim) Lawton's studio will be on the Craft Leaders study tour to Providence. His earthenware teapot is entitled "IS."

JAMES RENWICK ALLIANCE CAUCUS ART STUDY TOUR PROVIDENCE TO NANTUCKET

September 23 – September 26
From Nancy Schneider, Trip Leader

A burst of fall craft and fall color awaits the JRA Caucus in New England from Sept. 23 to Sept. 26.

The study tour begins on Wednesday in Providence with a welcome dinner at the home and studio of ceramic/print artist Kate Blacklock. Kate is coordinating a full day for us on Thursday with visits to five studios, two collections and a special behind the scenes tour of the Rhode Island School of Design museum with Assistant Director James Hall. The day will end with a reception by the water in Newport at Didi Suydam's Contemporary Gallery of jewelry, ceramics, sculpture, painting and photography.

The agenda on Friday includes the studios at Smokestack Studios: Alphonse Mattia, Eck Follen, Charles Swanson and Bruce Winn. The next day will be the fall kiln opening of Chris Gustin, an original chicken coop transformed into studio spaces for himself and his interns, living space, a large gallery and enough open space for us to have lunch and see just what this teaching/working enterprise is about.

Cape Cod is the next stop at Randy Darwall (fiber) and Brian Murphy's big yard while it's still warm and sunny. Their totally restored old house, barn and big yard are in the center of downtown Harwich and make a great backdrop for fabulous jackets and scarves.

The historic Dan'l Webster Inn in Sandwich will be home Friday and Saturday nights. Luckily it is just down the road from furniture maker Stephen Whittlesey who teaches at University of Massachusetts at Dartmouth

Saturday morning we are catching the 8 a.m. hydrofoil for Nantucket where Jayne and Robert Dane are planning a wonderful day visiting their gallery, the best craftsmen in basketry (Nantucket baskets) and scrimshaw as well as a few Nantucket collectors.

Those who must go home Sunday morning can go with Green Shuttle to the airport. If some want more time to either enjoy Cape Cod or visit more art, a separate van can make the trip more leisurely with stops along the way. We can be as creative as we want.

This caucus trip includes all lunches and dinners except for Friday night (after a gallery reception) for $625. Two nights at the Westin Providence (a Starwood hotel) are available for $139 a night and two nights at the Dan'l Webster are priced at $219 superior or $259 deluxe minus 10%.

Questions can be directed to me, the Caucus Trip Leader, by writing to nkschneider@verizon.net.

ALLIANCE STUDY TOUR TO LORTON THIS FALL

The James Renwick Alliance study tour for this fall will be to the Workhouse Arts Center at Lorton. Date will be announced later. The afternoon will be devoted to visiting the studios and galleries. The Center includes a Glass House and Ceramics House plus lots of other buildings with other 2-D artists. The day will conclude with a visit to a nearby JRA member's home.

CAUCUS STUDY TOUR WILL GO TO IRELAND, MAY 2010

The next international Craft Leaders Caucus study tour to Ireland is in mid-May 2010. A side trip, open for all James Renwick Alliance members, will be to the British Craft Council's COLLECT exhibition. Dates will be announced when the British Craft Council announces its date, hopefully in September.

The trip will have three legs: the Ireland portion, the COLLECT portion or a combination of both. COLLECT will probably be held in the same time frame as 2009: mid-May. Caucus members can choose among the above programs. The COLLECT program will be opened to all JRA members and not limited to Caucus members. David Montague is the trip leader.

Sonja Landweer's portfolio includes both sculptural forms in bronze and the recent addition of jewelry, shown here. She is from Jerpoint House, Thomastown, County Kilkenny.

Dick Fryklund and Brenda Erickson take part in Spring Craft Weekend.

Brenda Erickson, JRA board member, is chair of the website committee, and as such directs and monitors the content for www.jra.org. Developed under the auspices of Jane Mason, the website has been celebrating JRA activities and the studio craft movement for over 15 years. The site is public and available to all internet users across the world.

The website was created to further the mission of the alliance: support to the Renwick Gallery, craft education, support for craft artists, and assistance for craft lovers and craft collectors. The aim is to continue that tradition and with advances in technology expand the information and utility of the site.

The website is primarily for the use and convenience of members. As such, the home page alerts members to major JRA events and other major craft events across the nation. There is also a calendar of upcoming events for which members evince interest or participation.

Members can and should alert the JRA office of events to highlight on the calendar. As a benefit of membership, gallery caucus members are asked about their participation in craft events, and these are listed on the calendar or the home page. JRA artist members are also encouraged to notify the JRA office about their activities in shows, workshops and other events of interest to our members.

The JRA sponsors numerous activities throughout the year. These events are advertised and described in detail. They include craft study tours, JRA distinguished artist workshops and lectures, JRA Day, Spring Craft Weekend, and the Renwick Craft Fellowship, funded by the JRA.

As delight in craft art is visual, so the website and the internet allow for more pictorial images than most media. A goal for the current year is to extend and expand on the visual presentations and have the news and articles of events come alive on your computer. In the future will be the inclusion of more visuals about the artists that participate in JRA events and artists whose studios we visit during our craft study tours. While a picture cannot substitute for seeing an object in person, these visuals do educate our members on craft art and artists whose works we may not have known or seen.

The JRA is always looking to encourage new members to join or to participate in our activities. The website is the public face for acquainting other craft lovers of our activities. We intend the site to represent the same friendly, welcoming experience that we enjoy as members.

Editor's Note: Brenda Erickson joined the James Renwick Alliance Board of Directors when she retired in 2007. Her interest is in keeping members and the world informed about JRA and its activities. As a result of her interest and passion, she is a JRA board member to watch.

In addition, Brenda compiles the monthly electronic newsletter that is disseminated to all members with email addresses. Again, the purpose is similar. The newsletter is to inform member of events sponsored by the JRA or the Renwick Gallery of the Smithsonian Museum of American Art, as well as craft events in the Washington area and around the world.

As the Smithsonian has a national following, one does not need to live in the Washington area to participate in JRA activities. The website and newsletter are designed to keep the membership and craft lovers around the country informed and to be part of the fellowship of studio craft.

JRA PARTICIPATES INARTomatic

From Mallory Lawson, Organizer

ARTomatic—begun in 1999 in the historic Manhattan Laundry Building on Florida Avenue—has grown over the years to include over 1,000 participants, with over 100 craft artists exhibiting their art. The six week un-juried exhibition is held in a vacant building and organized by an enormous group of volunteers. Artists pay a small fee to cover the electricity, security and trash removal. This year's attendance figures topped 76,000, up 24,000 from last year. To help celebrate its steady growth and 10th year anniversary, the JRA became one of the sponsors, and the education room was named the James Renwick Alliance room. My goal was for the JRA to have an opportunity to connect with young collectors and emerging craft artists.

ARTomatic was on eight floors and covered 275,000 square feet of space! To say we all left with burning feet is an understatement.

A decision to have JRA form a three-part program was made at the initial meeting with Anne Mehringer, Tim Tate and George Koch, ARTomatic's founder. These included:

1. JRA Awards of Excellence to the craft artists;
2. Organize and present three weekend programs;
3. Schedule a JRA event during the show.

The first step was to organize a JRA/ARTomatic committee. Those people, who came mostly from our Guild membership, included Lynn Bechthold, Diane Cabe, Anallya Cespedes, Bev Denbo, Denise Dickens, Marilyn Falik, Bonnie Holland, Liz Mears and Sherry Selevan. They helped decide on the program topics, scope out where the crafts were located in the show, hand our program fliers to the craft artists, compile the four page list of Craft Sources in the DC Metro area for the third program and host the JRA reception.

The next item on the agenda was to form a panel of knowledgeable jurors to decide craft artists to receive the JRA Awards of Distinction. Jurors were Deena Kaplan, John Kotelly, Elmerina and Paul Parkman and Judy Weisman. This was no small task, since the show was on eight floors and covered 275,000 square feet of space! To say we all left with burning feet is an understatement. The winners were:

- Eric Celarier – Mixed Media
- Rania Hassan – Fiber
- James Long – Wood
- Laurel Lukaszewski – Ceramics
- Michael Sirvet – Metal
- Phillip Vickery – Glass

We were pleased to see excellent work in all the craft categories and surprised to see an exceptional amount of beautiful glass art, due in part to a large group of glass artists who travelled from Sunderland, England. The artists seemed genuinely honored and proudly displayed their ribbons throughout the duration of the show.

Next we organized three weekend programs held in the JRA Education Room. I narrated all three programs and assembled the panels. This was a challenge as two of the programs overlapped the Caucus Korea trip and the June Board meeting.

Our first topic, "What Are the Latest Trends in the Craft World" was presented by Nickolas Bell, associate curator of the Renwick Gallery, and our own Rebecca Cross, Tim Tate and Judy Weisman. Since all four panelists came from different professional positions, all craft related, it made for an interesting presentation.

The second topic, "What Makes a Piece of Craft Truly Exceptional" included Robyn Kennedy, chief of the Renwick Gallery; Michael Janis, co-founder of the Washington Glass School; and our own JRA members Chris Shea, metalsmith, and Binnie Fry, chair for the Artists of Distinction series. Again, everyone had different educational backgrounds and opinions as to what constitutes an extraordinary piece which made for a lively discussion.

"Where To Purchase Wonderful Craft in the DC Area" was the third and final subject. The committee compiled an extensive four page list which included major, regional and member shows, galleries, art centers, shops and museum shops. Denise Dickens and I presented this and were both surprised at the rich and varied list we developed. If any members would like a copy, please contact Sarah Frey, who worked hard with me to put it together.

After the third program, we had a JRA reception for those members who wanted to see ARTomatic, have a glass of wine, and receive a map with the craft winners designated so as not to collapse from exhaustion seeing the entire show.

Already the JRA is seeing positive feedback from our involvement with ARTomatic. Rania Hassan, the fiber winner, and her husband Sean Hennessey, a glass artist, have joined the JRA and have registered for JRA Day. The JRA was listed on the programs that all attendees received as well as on the Education Room, where many programs and workshops were held. Hundreds of membership brochures were picked up. And we've received thank you notes from the awardees (See Rania's sidebar below). All in all, ARTomatic was an interesting and positive new venture for the James Renwick Alliance.

LETTER FROM ARTOMATIC ARTIST RANIA HASSAN

Rania Hassan
Award of Distinction for Fiber

I would like to take the opportunity to thank the James Renwick Alliance for recognizing my installation at ARTomatic 2009 with the Craft Award of Distinction in Fiber. It is a deep honor for me to be noticed and acknowledged by an organization that I have so much admiration for and which represents the pinnacle of fine craft. This award is a profound encouragement for the direction I have been taking in my work.

For the past few years I have been developing works that combine knitting and painting. In my "Knit Together [Ktrog]" installation at ARTomatic, I illustrated the connectedness through craft and hand making that we all share with others. I find the delicacy in the threads of fiber and intricacy of the stitches themselves to be representative of community, and the painting serves as a means to fuel the narrative. My work is a statement about craft and the generational connection nurtured in person and even online.

So, thank you for the recognition of my work, the wonderful support you have given me, and for the inspiration and encouragement to continue to build our community and to perfect and explore my craft.

—Rania Hassan

JRA Fellow Jenneken Smucker Describes Research on Amish Quilts

As the James Renwick Pre-doctoral Fellow in American Craft, I have made great progress during the past six months toward completion of my dissertation, "From Rags to Riches: Amish Quilts and the Crafting of Value." While in tenure at the Smithsonian American Art Museum, I spent many focused hours conducting research and drafting major portions of several dissertation chapters. My dissertation investigates how individuals, communities, and institutions constructed the value of Amish quilts during the late twentieth century. In the 1970s old Amish quilts became status symbols within the art world because they looked like abstract paintings when hung on walls.

When dealers came knocking on Amish doors in search of quilts, families were eager to sell rather than continue to own an object the outside world considered a valuable work of art. Soon Amish entrepreneurs found additional ways to benefit from the newfound interest in their bedcovers; they made new quilts to sell to the retail market. I explore the Amish struggle to negotiate their relationship with the "world" and mainstream Americans' search for meaning through the consumption of quilts.

While a fellow, one of my primary areas of research surrounded events in the early 1990s known as the Smithsonian Quilt Controversy. In 1991 the Smithsonian's Office of Product Licensing and Development contracted with American Pacific Enterprises, an American company with a quilt production facility in China, to reproduce adaptations of historic quilts in the National Museum of American History's collection to sell to consumers through mail order catalogs and department stores.

Once these quilts were available on the retail market, the Smithsonian experienced its largest negative write-in campaign to date, facing constituents outraged by its decision to license "national treasures" to be reproduced in factories in China. While thousands of protesters signed petitions, wrote angry letters, or rescinded their Smithsonian memberships, tens of thousands of consumers bought these copies of "American heritage" quilts. I researched this topic at the Smithsonian Institution Archives and the National Museum of American History.

I also conducted research using the Renwick Gallery's exhibition files. Since its inception, the Renwick has played a prominent role in the promotion of quilts as art objects—one of the themes of my dissertation. My research benefited from exhibition files from "American Pieced Quilts" (1972), "Quilts from the Indiana Amish" (1987), and "Amish Quilts from the Collection of Faith and Stephen Brown" (2000). These records helped elucidate how curators and private collectors began to value quilts as aesthetic objects and how exhibitions helped disseminate this re-evaluation of quilts to larger audiences.

In addition to conducting research in primary source collections, my work benefited significantly from the use of secondary sources in the American Art/Portrait Gallery Library. I relished the ability to make the short trip downstairs from my office in the American Art Museum suite in the Victor Building to consult sources. The Fellows' Office environment at American Art was a perfect place for focused writing; I drafted major portions of three dissertation chapters.

The Office's quiet policy ensured that the only thing I and the other fellows heard was the steady clicking of fingers on keyboards. I additionally benefited from the collegiality of working alongside other fellows in this office; through both formal discussions and informal conversations I developed new ways of thinking about my project thanks to other fellows' insights.

I am grateful for this opportunity to use the wealth of resources at the Smithsonian. I hope the James Renwick Alliance can continue to support young scholars such as myself as we contemplate the role of hand-crafted objects in the material world. Thank you so much for your generous support.

SOFA Chicago is coming up Nov. 6, 7, 8 with the JRA Brunch on Saturday, Nov. 7. Information on sign up for JRA events will be posted early this fall.

JRA PLANS SOFA CHICAGO PARTICIPATION

The James Renwick Alliance will be participating in SOFA Chicago activities during its annual exhibition Nov. 6, 7, and 8.

The JRA table in the Resources Area will be manned with member participation, and the annual brunch on Saturday, Nov. 7 will take place from 9:30 a.m. with members, gallery caucus members and artists attending.

Sarah Frey will send out notices to sign up for SOFA participation when notified by SOFA administration. SOFA has negotiated hotel rates at several hotels which are on its website www.sofaexpo.com.

One special program open to JRA members will be a banquet honoring ceramic artists who have made significant contributions to the field, sponsored by the Watershed Center for Ceramic Arts. JRA has been offered two tables for its members.

David and Clemmer Montague are in charge of the weekend's programs.

My Cup Overflows is the title of the solo exhibition of James Renwick Alliance Artist Member Chunghie Lee which goes through Oct. 18 at the Fuller Craft Museum, Brockton, MA.

Korean-born and Rhode Island-based fiber artist Chunghie Lee is internationally recognized for her artwork. Inspired by traditional Korean wrapping cloths called pojagi (pronounced po-jah-ki), Lee's installation in Fuller Craft Museum's Merton and Alma Tarlow Gallery includes wall pieces, sculpture and wearable work that reference the anonymous, ancient women of Korea who once created these functional works of art.

Lee is currently a member of the adjunct faculty at the Rhode Island School of Design. Chunghie Lee: My Cup Overflows is her 19th solo exhibition.

CAUCUS PICNIC MAKES A PERFECT DAY

Deena and Jerry Kaplan welcomed Caucus members to their fabulous home for a bountiful Sunday Summer Picnic on July 19th. Their enormous and exemplary craft collection, amassed over several decades, provided an extraordinary treasure hunt for the “Name That Artist” competition, won (for the second year in a row) by Clemmer and David Montague. The beautiful weather, memorable setting and delectable menu made for an outstanding picnic indeed.

AMERICAN ART ANNOUNCES 2009 FELLOW: DANA BYRD

The Smithsonian American Art Museum’s Fellowship Program Coordinator Amelia Goerlitz announced that Dana Byrd, a PhD candidate at Yale University, is the 2009 James Renwick Fellow in American Craft.

Byrd’s dissertation concerns the material culture of the post-bellum plantation and its place in the ideological battle between the North and the South. She will arrive in residency in September. Goerlitz announced two publications by former Renwick fellows. Choosing Craft: the Artist’s Viewpoint (University of North Carolina Press, 2009) is a collection of artists’ writings co-edited by Vicki Halper who conducted much of her research during a 2005 Renwick fellowship. Elissa Auther, 2002 Renwick Fellow and now assistant professor of contemporary art at the University of Colorado at Colorado Springs, will publish her book String, Felt, Thread: The Hierarchy of Art and Craft in American Art with the University of Minnesota Press this winter. In it, she examines American fiber art and the impact of its elevation on the conceptual boundaries distinguishing “art” from “craft” in the post war era.

Goerlitz’s letter to Anne Mehringer reads, “We could not be more proud of our Renwick fellows, whose scholarship is expanding the traditional boundaries of American art. We thank you for your continued support and will continue to keep the JRA apprised of the fellows’ activities.”
